

SPECIAL NOTE: If your birthday falls between May 30 and June 6, the next six months could bring sweeping changes to your private life. If you are single this could mean an intense, extraordinary and instant attraction which may not last long. If you are married, much will depend on your skill in handling your partner.

YOUR STARS

With Stella Recamier

ARIES (Mar 21-Apr 19) During the next three weeks you will be sorting your finances, considering an expensive purchase, upgrading your income or receiving practical items. Some of you could follow up a profitable scheme but you will have to be realistic with prices, quality, clauses or employers' standards next weekend and on Tuesday week. Pleasant meetings, news or a special reunion should brighten June which would be ideal for a holiday. A lucky coincidence next Saturday, after 11 am.

TAURUS (Apr 20-May 21) With Mercury in your Sun sign until June 7, you can expect a busy, colourful time, packed with new interests, more outings, a short trip and valuable introductions. Something which has been in doubt over the past few weeks should be resolved next weekend, with good news after lunch on Wednesday for many of you. Choose Friday morning if you want to make a good impression, but be more cautious on Monday and Tuesday around noon.

GEMINI (May 22-June 21) From May 27 to June 20 you will appreciate more warmth in your relationships, a brighter social life and the company of easygoing, appealing people. If you are single this could be a wonderful interval with significant events near mid June. If you have been uneasy over your romance however, you may suddenly decide to end it in the first week of June. Unusual developments could confuse you next Sunday.

CANCER (June 22-July 21) In the next four weeks you will have a chance to review your options and prepare yourself for a decisive cycle in July when you can proceed more confidently. A person on whose help you are hoping will be supportive then and though you could be discouraged next weekend or near May 29, you will succeed after your birthday. Thursday, Friday morning are your best times but some friction is likely tomorrow.

LEO (July 22-Aug 21) Although you will not be freed from recent pressures until mid August, you will experience some improvement personally and financially in June. People will be more flexible, with one friend being remarkably helpful near June 16. Some domestic and professional problems could be difficult to handle on Tuesday and Wednesday. A pleasant surprise next Saturday.

VIRGO (Aug 22-Sep 21) You should be successful on Thursday and Friday mornings, which highlight brisk approval or clever suggestions and instant rapport. Similarly you will find an effective way of dealing with a stubborn person or problem next Sunday afternoon after early morning hassles. In the coming three weeks you will finalise banking, legal or travel arrangements and renew contact with a relative or old friend. Travel carefully early hours and late night Wednesday.

LIBRA (Sep 22-Oct 22) Your social and romantic life should sparkle next month, with more popularity and valuable connections by the middle of June. By then you will know exactly where you stand in a relationship which has caused worries this year. Tuesday evening, Friday night feature good news, much needed backing or a profitable deal. Some irritations next Sunday night.

SCORPIO (Oct 23-Nov 22) You should have no problems in getting what you want on Thursday, Friday around 10 am so if you have an important request, appointment or intricate scheme on your agenda, take action then. In contrast, do weigh your words and actions carefully on tomorrow and Tuesday near noon — you could regret hasty moves, decisions later. Your partner could come up with an ingenious alternative next Sunday night.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov 23-Dec 22) Your personal relationships will run smoothly as Venus lights up your opposite sign between May 27-June 20. On several occasions you will share happy moments with that special person and will be impressed with someone who goes out of their way to help around June 18. A dreamy romance is likely if unattached. Tuesday, Thursday evenings, Saturday lunch hour should be bright. Do be very diplomatic, safety-minded on Wednesday.

CAPRICORN (Dec 21-Jan 19) By the end of this month you will have reached agreement on a vexing issue which has been in the background since January and you may be aware of the turn of events next Sunday evening. At that stage and on May 29, you could intervene in a complex situation involving your eldest child or a friend. You will find better opportunities on Thursday or Friday morning. Avoid long range commitments tomorrow and next Sunday morning.

AQUARIUS (Jan 20-Feb 18) The discord, obstacles, and personal frustrations of the past few weeks will fade after the end of May but in the meantime you may have to take a firm line with unreliable people on Monday, Tuesday. Next month you will have a happier time with younger, attractive persons and can map out major plans for September. Tuesday evening, Saturday afternoon should brighten your mood.

PISCES (Feb 19-Mar 20) You will find it easier to prove a point and enjoy softer relationships in the next three weeks — during this period you will solve an outstanding problem which appeared earlier this year. Great ideas, favours or profits underscore Thursday and Friday morning. Don't be afraid to follow your convictions on Wednesday however — someone could be devious in the early morning or later that night.

WEATHER

With Channel 7's Mike Bailey

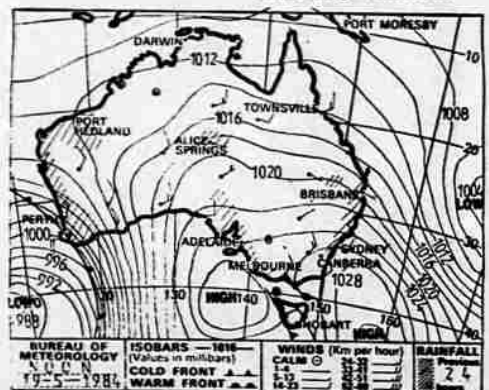

Sydney

EARLY cloud with the chance of a shower or two. Sunny periods lengthening. Light to moderate south-east to east winds. Mainly slight seas on a low to moderate swell. Maximum temperatures around 20 deg.

SOME showers will persist about the coast today, mainly north of Sydney, but the weather is continuing to improve after its sudden deterioration last Friday.

Sunny periods should lengthen in the Sydney area during the day, but the chance of a shower or two will still be with us until early tomorrow.

WEATHER BUREAU REGIONAL FORECASTS
Northern Rivers: Cloudy days with a few showers. Mild SE winds 10/20 knots. Moderate seas and swell.
Mild North Coast: Cloudy days with a few showers. Mild SE winds 10/20 knots. Moderate seas and swell. Morning fog patches inland.
Hunter: Cool to mild days with a few showers, locally heavy on the coast. SE to E winds 10/15 knots. Areas of morning fog. Slight seas and a moderate swell.
South Coast/Illawarra: Cool to mild, partly cloudy days. A shower or two in the north, fine southwards. Morning fog patches inland. E to NE winds 5/15 knots. Seas slight and a low swell.
Northern Tablelands: Cool to mild days. Mainly cloudy, but sunny periods in the west. A few showers or drizzle in the east. Morning fog patches. Light to moderate easterly winds.
Southern Tablelands: Cool, partly cloudy days. Widespread morning fogs and drizzle in the east. Light to moderate easterly winds.
NW slopes & Plains: Mild, dry and partly cloudy days. Light E to NE winds. Morning fog patches.
Central West Slopes & Plains: Mild and dry, partly cloudy days. Light to moderate E winds. Areas of morning fog.
SW Slopes: Cool to mild, partly cloudy and dry days. Light to moderate E to NE winds. Areas of morning fog.
Riverina/MIA: Cool to mild, partly cloudy and dry days. Light to moderate NE winds. Areas of morning fog.
Upper Western: Mild days with lengthy sunny periods. Dry. Light to moderate easterly winds. Morning fog in the east.
Lower Western: Cool to mild days with lengthy sunny periods. Dry. Light to moderate NE winds. Areas of morning fog.

A STRONG high-pressure ridge in the southern Tasman directs a ridge over south-eastern Australia. An intense low cell near Norfolk Island gives rise to a strong SE flow along the NE coast. A low and associated cold front is to the SW of Western Australia.

AND so Steve Terbot the psychic is a fake. Real name: Bob Steiner, a professional magician from San Francisco ... brought out to Australia by the Australian Sceptics, to pose, lie and posture as a genuine example of the paranormal.

His motive? He hoped, or hopes, to prove what charlatans abound, what crooks and fakes there are and how easy it is for them to take down the gullible and take their money and run.

Terbot/Steiner confessed to this exercise in deception on the Bert Newton Show on Thursday night — confessed that all his psychic "experiences" and predictions, mind-reading and card tricks were simply that: Tricks.

What happened, the timetable, and why, has caused some controversy and readers and TV viewers deserve an explanation. What did I know and when did I know it?

I had never heard of Steve Terbot until two weeks ago when I read Phillip Adams' column about him and received a press release purportedly from Jean Curtaine PhD who had supposedly spent three years testing Mr Terbot in his laboratory.

The following Monday I attacked him on Radio 3AW in Melbourne. To my mind we were about to be visited by yet another fake, another psychic mumbo-jumbo expert, another TV guru who would do "miracles", read minds and take your money.

Later that week I was contacted by the Australian Sceptics president, Mark Plummer, sworn to secrecy, and told that Terbot was in fact a "mole", an American Sceptic who would show what quacks and cheats the psychics were.

From the beginning of all this I have told you he was a fake. On radio, on television, in last week's Sun-Herald, I said don't be fooled by his gibberish or his actions. He is a magician, nothing more, nothing less.

THE BEST OF HINCH

With Derryn Hinch

Despite what I said about Terbot, Geller, Stokes, 100 people at one of Terbot's public meetings in Melbourne asked for private readings at $25 a time. He could have (but didn't) collected a quick $2,000.

Obviously I knew that Terbot was not who he appeared to be when he appeared on the Bert Newton Show on the Thursday Night. I knew that when I bet $10,000 he was a phony.

But that offer still stands. The money is still there as a target for any psychic claimant ... so is the $100,000 wagered by Dick Smith and the $10,000 by Phillip Adams.

SOME people, many people, have said both in print and on radio since the expose that they have been exploited, they have been conned, Hinch has lost his credibility.

Why? Everything I said about Terbot I have said about other psychic charlatans. For years they have come out here, appeared on radio and television unchallenged, filled town halls, charged you to get in, conducted private readings.

They lie to you, exploit you, take your money and raise your hopes. They play with your emotions for the simple motive of personal greed. For too long their predictions and their chicanery have gone unchallenged.

For too long the media has been a sycophantic lover on this issue.

I know there still are believers convinced that Uri Geller has magic fingers and can twist keys and bend forks. They will attack me, and the people involved in this experiment, and they will say: "This one was a fake but there are real ones."

If by being involved in the Steve Terbot affair I have stopped one sick person, from getting on a plane today for the Philippines then it has been worthwhile.

If I have stopped one pensioner from parting with $25 of his or her pension cheque for a card reading, or a personalised horoscope into what the future holds for them, I have succeeded.

And if, in six months or a year, the next internationally acclaimed psychic comes out here and appears on television with a panoply of powers, I hope even the believers remember "Steve Whatsisname" and think maybe it's a con.

Maybe then even some of our more trenchant critics will concede the ends last week justified the means.

Know him? We've just kissed...

YOU noticed, of course, that fascinating picture of Prince Charles greeting Prince Edward.

First they embraced then Prince Charles kissed his brother on the cheek. "Has Prince Charles unwittingly cut a curious taboo?" asked the Daily Express. "Has he sparked a new fashion for men?"

Oh yes, it had to come. English footballers have been kissing each other for years. So much so that the Scottish Football Association in a letter to its players asked them to stop, saying that kissing and hugging didn't do anything for the image of the game.

You must appreciate Soccer is a difficult game. A goal is such a rare and wonderful event that upon the perpetration of this wondrous act they throw arms around each and kiss in appreciation of it all.

Hugging has come to Australian Rules football. Not as eloquent and as beautiful as in Soccer, but make no mistake it is there.

We have been embracing in cricket now for six or seven years. Dennis Lillee is a fantastic embracer and if a player takes a remarkable catch off his bowling he will run 20 metres or so to embrace. "Henry" Lawson too upon taking a difficult wicket, particularly a Viv Richards or a Desmond Haynes, will exchange embraces all around.

I wouldn't say that they actually kiss, but we are poised and ready for it. After all, the bowling out of West Indian batsmen is becoming even rarer than goals in Soccer. Should we take any West Indian wickets next summer it is as inevitable as an unrelenting pitch that kisses will be exchanged.

Kissing is booming as never before. You had to be careful about it in my day. My father-in-law didn't approve of holding hands in public and he used to point out that kissing was something one did discreetly and certainly never, never out in the streets.

By KEITH DUNSTAN

Good grief, now kissing goes on everywhere. People even kiss each other in the midst of church services to show their warm fellowship. You ought to see the passion that goes on at our railway station, even at eight in the morning. You wouldn't see better in an R-rated movie.

Mr Brezhnev was a great kisser both of males and females. In his heyday he not only kissed Dr Kissinger on the lips but embraced him in such a bear hug he lifted him clear off his feet.

President Carter was an indefatigable kisser and used to kiss almost everyone in sight. The Queen Mother was startled when she received a Jimmy Carter kiss. She is quoted as saying: "He is the only man, since my dear husband died, to have had the effrontery to kiss me on the lips."

Kissing is terribly in on talk and interview shows. When Parkinson or Bert Newton kiss it reveals at once the wonderful intimacy and rapport they have with their guests. Time magazine recently quoted Murray Davis, an eminent sociologist in California:

"Increased kissing is part of the general inflation of intimate signals. We kiss people we used to hug, hug people we used to shake hands with, and shake hands with people we used to nod to. Not to kiss or hug means one is not relating. Everyone is expected to kiss everyone else."

You know what it is like now when you go to some of the parties in the nice suburbs. It is compulsory to kiss your hostess and if it is a gathering of only six or eight you are expected to kiss the female guests also.

There is a momentary second of tension. Should you or shouldn't you? Your wife is standing by with a critical eye to see what sort of a job you make of it.

Some hostesses are remarkably kissable. They offer a warm pair of lips and you know you are in for an excellent night. Then it works by zones. If the kiss comes off just to the left or right of the lips with a lingering press on the cheek you know things are pretty good.

But from there on you work further and further into areas of frigidity. I know hostesses who give me that Bass Strait in the winter look and offer me an area somewhere to the north of the ear hole. Then there are those who are terribly skilled. They dance up for the fake kiss.

The whole act is performed so that lips and cheek remain 10 millimetres apart.

You can get away with hand kissing. That is still considered very gallant. However, if you really want to be a success, prove that you are about to be the wow of the party kiss your hostess on both cheeks. That sends 'em. Although you may have to explain why you did it when you get home.

But it is a worry. I mean this Prince Charles thing. You can't dismiss it that easily. People do follow the dictates of Royalty. Wasn't it Edward VII who started putting his creases in his pants and wasn't he the fellow who started leaving the bottom waistcoat button undone?

There was too much under the waistcoat to do up the button. Ah, but one Royal was doing it then everybody had to follow.

So if Prince Charles has started the male kissing habit we will have to do it. It will be hard work at cocktail parties kissing all the women and all the men too. Will the chaps offer their lips or will you kiss their ear holes?

I'm damned if I'm going to kiss any chap who is sporting a beard!