

THE BEST

I dream of caulie with a light cheese sauce

The cauliflower, for KEITH DUNSTAN, is the most beautiful flower God created. He tried to grow some of his own. TONY BILSON'S recipes should make Dunstan's mouth water . . .

THERE has always been a deep streak of vulgarity in my nature. You know, a sort of terror of not being noticed. There was only one way to overcome this: grow the biggest plants and vegetables in the entire street.

The theory was that people would wander past and say: "My, aren't they fantastic."

So I grew dahlias; not the miserable little dwarfs but the giant variety with heads as big as rubbish tin lids. I would stake them so that they would nod over the front fence for every neighbour to admire.

They all had names — Vivien Leigh, ▷
