

Magin's

HOME RESTORATION PRODUCTS

Opening Celebration Sale

Magin's have moved to a new location and we are offering great value during October renovating month.

ALL BRASS HARDWARE REDUCED

with many lines HALF PRICE Here are some examples:—

1. 28mm $2.00	4. 1/2" $12.00	9. 1/2" $12.00
2. 43mm $2.00	5. 1/2" $12.00	10. 1/2" $12.00
3. 25mm $2.00	6. 1/2" $12.00	11. 1/2" $12.00
33mm $2.00	7. 1/2" $12.00
30mm $2.00	8. 1/2" $12.00
35 mm $2.00

PRICES TO CELEBRATE ON Fire Surrounds & Grates:—

1. Standard Mantel $295 $275	2. Panelled Mantel $295 $299	3. Arched $435 $350	4. Arched $275 $249
--------------------------------	--------------------------------	-----------------------	-----------------------

Restorers Note — Minton Hobbies English Victorian Tile $1.75
Full range of Victorian and Art Deco Lights.

CENTRAL LOCATION
215-219 Swan St., Richmond
Hours: 6-9 pm Monday to Friday 9-1 pm Saturday

MELBOURNE LIVING 2

'Craft Survey '85'

at State Bank Galleria

THE Queen Victoria Medical Centre is one of the few general public hospitals in Melbourne with full teaching status. Although its patients represent the whole spectrum of family life from pre-birth to old age, it is perhaps best known for its neonatal intensive care unit in Lonsdale Street.

This is headed by Professor Victor Yu, one of the most charming men I have ever met. Like his colleagues at the Queen Vic, this dedicated doctor is continually looking for ways to raise money for expensive equipment needed for research work. Next week he will be in luck, due to the stalwart efforts of a lively committee chaired by Mrs Michael Seaby.

A substantial percentage of all sales from an exciting 'Craft Survey '85' exhibition to be held at the State Bank Galleria between 15 October and 1 November will go to the medical centre. This large exhibition (on the corner of Elizabeth and Bourke streets) will display sculpture, ceramics, leather, horn and silver ware by leading artists David Fincher, Jason Monet, Sony Manning, Alistair White, Susan Cohn and Peter Gertler, to name a few.

Jocelyn Seaby and her committee "conned" me into opening the 'Craft Survey '85' exhibition next Monday at 5.30 pm. To attend the opening party you require an entry card with your name on it. It costs $12.50 and is obtainable only by telephoning Marcia Coleman on 665 5706. Personally I would not pay $12.50 to hear Sheila Scotter, but I am going to because one could win an Ansett holiday for two in Queensland.

Other door prizes include bed and breakfast for two at Rockman's Regency Hotel, lunches for two at the Regent, tickets for the fabulous musical 'La Cage aux Folles', also for a performance of 'Lohengrin' by the VSO in December, plus many other surprises. See you there.

Why not a milk bath?

WHEN I lived in London, where the water was particularly hard, I used to love bubble-baths. They smell gorgeous, were invigorating, and even cleaned the bath. However, to combat their drying effect on my skin I remember having to use lots and lots of oils or moisturisers.

Today, anyone interested can peruse every issue. Veritas Publishing Company has reproduced 'Aussie' in book form. The red, white and blue hard-covered volume contains the complete reprint of each edition of the original 1914-18 newspaper. It is fascinating reading, and packed with hilarious cartoons and some satirical advertisements to remind us that these brave boys could certainly "send up" (my phrase) their officers in the nicest possible way.

Copies of 'Aussie' cost $25 each and can be obtained from The Heritage Bookshop, 2nd floor, 145 Russell Street (telephone 63 9749). If anyone starts a Grandfather's Day or Elderly Uncle's Day, put this on your list, although I think many servicemen and ex-servicemen would enjoy being given a copy. Sir Colin Hines, OBE, in the foreword says: "This is as much a piece of our Australian history as the most erudite volumes written by learned men of letters."

Sheila Scotter

Eventually, I went off them; bubble-baths that is. But now I have discovered a soothing Milk Bath that produces froth and bubbles galore. Made by The Body Shop in England, it contains a natural protein (developed by the Quaker Oats Company of Chicago), whey powder (fresh milk would go rancid), soothing avocado oil (rapidly absorbed by the skin) and lactose (to soften the water).

This Milk Bath is sold in white cloth, drawstring, miniature four bags.

Sensibly, the powder is doubly packaged in plastic, so it does not spill and is not affected by the steamy atmosphere of bathrooms. You use it by the tablespoonful under running bath water. It makes the water milky, frothy and much softer, and after the bath your skin feels wonderful.

A 200 gram bag costs only $6.95 and is available from all branches of The Body Shop here in Melbourne (State Bank Galleria, Collins Place, Sports Gift Court, Chadstone and Brighton). Our country readers can order it by mail. All you do is write to GPO Box 2522W, Melbourne, 3001, and add $2 for postage and packaging. Ask, too, for a catalogue, as The Body Shop products (all made with natural ingredients) are fabulous, particularly for anyone with allergies or sensitive skins.

The diggers' own paper

I WONDER if many people know that our brave diggers who served in France during World War I actually published their own newspaper? I didn't. Called 'Aussie', it was written, illustrated and printed in the field by members of the AIF. The cover price was 10 centimes.

Today, anyone interested can peruse every issue. Veritas Publishing Company has reproduced 'Aussie' in book form. The red, white and blue hard-covered volume contains the complete reprint of each edition of the original 1914-18 newspaper. It is fascinating reading, and packed with hilarious cartoons and some satirical advertisements to remind us that these brave boys could certainly "send up" (my phrase) their officers in the nicest possible way.

Copies of 'Aussie' cost $25 each and can be obtained from The Heritage Bookshop, 2nd floor, 145 Russell Street (telephone 63 9749). If anyone starts a Grandfather's Day or Elderly Uncle's Day, put this on your list, although I think many servicemen and ex-servicemen would enjoy being given a copy. Sir Colin Hines, OBE, in the foreword says: "This is as much a piece of our Australian history as the most erudite volumes written by learned men of letters."

I've got a head rattling with unassimilated facts. Let's give it a shake and see what tumbles out.

Three models in a rage. One is a slender ash-blond still fuming at the coordinates chosen for the morning fashion show. Cream shoes with a beige skirt? Sounds all right to me. Peach blouse with lemon slacks?

"Look, we all agree with you," her friend says. "But we think that since they're paying us, we should put up with it."

This squeezes out a little shriek from Blondie. "They're not paying near enough in my opinion. And the make-up staff are hideous. Get there an hour early and do it yourself, that's my advice. Just use their colors."

The models all despair, and disappear. I am now in Coolaroo. And here comes Mr Coolaroo himself with his explosive "Ha-ha-ha, hey!" laugh and his sublime description of an accident between a Datsun and a semi-trailer. "The semi just flipped it round and sent it off in another direction... choong!"

Girls, girls, girls. Going on a cruise in late October and slimming down courageously in preparation for the great parade of flesh. "I really think that I can do it," says the one with lips as thin as muesli flakes and thighs like a rubber dinghy. "Really think that I can take it off."

Someone mentions the cask of wine she drank the day before. "Oh alcohol, that's all right. It helps with the digestion and kills all the germs in your throat." The things they censor out of medical journals.

I am a leaking bag of useless information. I rarely ask a question yet people give me all the answers on a tray. A major city newspaper has executives who thrash out stratagems and overviews long after they have left the safety of head office. Why don't they take a tram? — I'm really not that interested. What is a weekday tabloid anyway? Some sort of wonder drug for hypertension sufferers? I'll have to ask my editor.

Even worse are journo on the job. Only comparison in this town with picking up a journo on a big assignment is picking up that duffel-coated bloke standing in the centre of the tram tracks in Fitzroy Street, St Kilda, on a Friday night. Either way you are suddenly involved in melodrama. "Quick, down Acland Street. My life depends on it, and don't mind if I crouch here on the floor and stop breathing for a few minutes."

Journos are much the same. You hear their notebooks rattling in the dark, their heartbeats pacing with the taps. When you talk to them their ears twitch; and when they get out of the cab they break into a gallop.

Only difference is that when your St Kilda desperado breaks into a gallop he somehow manages to keep his feet, whereas your journo does a nose-dive at the kerb.

APRISTINE day, the sky above the bay drenched with blue and green, air crisp and still. A man with a twisted body and a walking-frame stares peacefully across the water; at this brief moment his limbs seem swept back from the weather side, the south-west, like the leaning tea-tree all around him.

But you don't stop there, you drive on to the restaurant where the bustling Filipino girls are waiting. Among their shrill chatter one voice is soon insisting that she has to call her husband. "Call your husband?" says a second voice.

"That's alright for you but I can't call my husband any more." "What, no telephone?" asks the first.

"No, no husband" screeches the second, laughing yet another round of laughter.

Then an hour passes and you realise that the milk-skinned eastern-suburbs woman alongside you has just made a brave admission — she is dying of leukaemia. Why does she tell? Perhaps because it's spring, the gardens are alive with pink and claret blossom, and she, like them, has always lived right at the surface. Which must now be her great fortune.

She says that this has been the happiest of days. A group of friends took her to their members-only club and guess what... she won the raffle three times in a row! "What do you think of that sort of luck?" she asks me.

I think the gaming squad should interview the man who drew the ticket. Well, you don't end with her either, but instead pick up a pensioner from Blackburn whose dull voice drifts slowly towards a soothing monotone until something makes you sit up straight and listen. Something quite exceptional that she has said. There it is again. She heard a news report that robbers took away an ostrich in their getaway car. An ostrich.

"Hostage, you stupid woman! Hostage!" I call out as she walks away, knowing full well that her ears are blocked with wax. It was enough for one day. I went home. — Chris Hanlon

When reporters will file by infograph

Continued from Living 1

I have told you about the international, national and city newspapers, but oddly enough in 2035 the biggest interest is in local newspapers. It is getting harder and harder to inspire interest in international affairs or even in Canberra.

What with the 15-hour week, the citizens want to know what's happening locally. The great energy crisis of 2005 helped that. I mean, remember how everybody used to own an automobile; a lot of people had two.

When petrol went over $300 a litre the car started to disappear. People rode bicycles, the horse came back. The biggest joke was the freeways. They divided them up, turned them into basketball courts, skating rinks, tennis courts, bowling alleys, bicycle paths.

Well, there was the information revolution, you see. Travel wasn't necessary so much any more. Everything could be done by computer. Anyway tourism was finished. I think 35 million people tried to go through the Tower of London in the year 2000. So travel was the ultimate agony.

Thus local information became tremendously important. There was still room for journalists. Computers couldn't gather stories on their own. And I'm glad to say gossip columnists in 2035 are even more popular than ever.

There are still some printed magazines... papers such as the 'Bulletin' and 'National Times' have survived. People still look for interpretation of news, but the real boomers are the leisure journals — wood-carving, model-train journals, hobbies, and particularly do-it-yourself magazines.

You must appreciate that do-it-yourself activities have boomed as never before. If Mr Newton was still around he would have coined a fourth law of motion. The shorter the working week — the greater the doing it yourself.

The 15-hour week means that the cost of employing a tradesman in the home is getting beyond our means. Admittedly inflation has been severe, but carpenters, painters, plumbers, electricians and such are charging $500 an hour.

And if you call in a computer diagnostician, that's appalling; $100 for a five-minute visit. You have to get the diagnostician first just to identify the problem, then the physician will attend to the trouble.

The answer therefore is this. Just to survive you have to do almost everything. People in the eighties used to wonder what we would do with our prolonged leisure. Well, that's it. We do almost everything ourselves. Hence the boom in information journals.

Naturally people take great care now, before they get married. One chooses a partner who has technical skills; one likes a spouse to have graduated in electrical engineering, laser or computer technology.

That surprises you about marriage? Since the great AIDS and drug-related epidemics of 1990 and 1992 there has been a return to religion like of which has not been seen since the Reformation. Moral purity has taken over.

Book censorship is just like it was in the 1930s. An antique blue-movie video, I mean a copy of 'Deep Throat', is now worth a million dollars on the black market.

Alcohol too is a dirty word. The 'Temperance Times' is the most popular national newspaper and Carlton IXL, the national monopoly brewery, produces only Foster's Temperance Lager. It contains no alcohol.

Sport? I almost forgot to tell you about that. The interest still is immense but attendances fell and fell right through the nineties. Clearly people were interested only in watching it on the quite marvelous three-dimensional television.

So the Packer family instituted a vast sports centre at Alice Springs. They chose Alice Springs because of its central location, good light and total absence of rain. All Test matches, for example, are now played there.

There are no crowds at all. It is done entirely for television and electronic newspapers. It's nice for the entrepreneurs; no mess, no empty cans, no automobiles.

Atmosphere? Well, you have your two-way telly. You can applaud by pushing a button. Or you can even register a boo, a howl at the umpire or a witty comment. If it passes the Sporting Authority Censorship Board it will even register with the official crowd noise.

It is not the same, of course. I get nostalgic for the old Paddington Hill or even Bay 13 at the MCG.

I am trying desperately to get Mr Wells's Time Machine to work properly. It has this terrible bend in the left-hand bar of the tripod where I hit an antenna in Bourke Street.

I want to return to 1985. Those were the good old days.

— Keith Dunstan

Bonner's suburban bushland

Continued from Living 1

ner, like so many men, speaks so loudly that he doesn't need a phone. However, as the call is from America, he takes it.

I ask if he has done any directing.

"Absolutely. And this is where maybe I will end up in my life. But it is certainly an area of the industry that I absolutely adore."

What does he think of Australian films?

"I've always been a great and staunch supporter of the industry, knowing full well the budgetary constraints that we've had to work within and therefore compete against extraordinary budgets overseas. But budgets aren't always the making or the breaking of a film. Our subject matters have been interesting. I think 'Breaker Morant' is one of our better films. I loved 'Breaker' — no, I wasn't in it, I can't think what the hell I was doing. I'd like to have been."

Even though I feel I have met Tony Bonner the actor, not the man, there is no doubting his talents nor his sincerity.

I ask if he will stay in show business.

"On absolutely. No question. No question, I mean, this is the industry that I love, this is the industry that I am excited about. I just intend to get better."

Commemorating The visit of the Prince and Princess of Wales on the occasion of Victoria's 150th Anniversary November 1985

In an edition limited to 100

Wm. Drummond, makers of the diamond wattle brooch presented to H.M. the Queen in 1954 and the diamond and ruby brooch presented to H.M. the Queen Mother in 1958, proudly announce the commission of a limited edition of pill boxes from the makers of the famous Bilston & Battersea enamels.

Victoria's armorial ensign with its brilliant colours will grace the lid, whilst the reference to the Royal Visit is shown inside.

Prized by collectors all over the world, both as tokens of taste and sentiment and as small works of art with acknowledged investment value, this pill box will be a unique and valuable addition to any collection, or would be a perfect first purchase.

The offer is one only to each client on a first come basis. Priced at $300 each, a deposit of $50 will reserve one of these unique pieces. Our staff will be delighted to assist you with any further enquiries at either of our two stores.

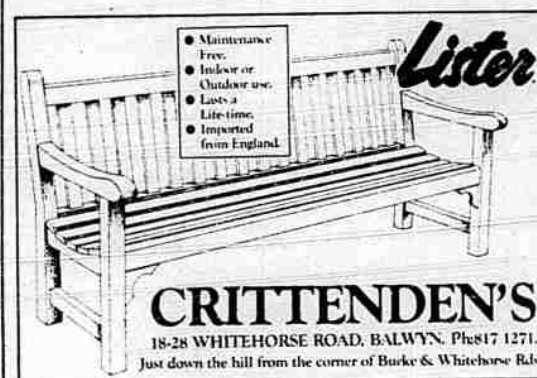

Wm. DRUMMOND & CO.

Established 1857

384 Bourke Street, Melbourne Ph. 67 8725. *158 Toorak Road, South Yarra Ph. 266 4141

*Open Saturday Morning

don't miss MONDAY JOB MARKET

CRITTENDEN'S
18-28 WHITEHORSE ROAD, BALWYN. Ph: 817 1271.
Just down the hill from the corner of Burke & Whitehorse Rds.

Miele

BEST PRICES AND SERVICE

Michael King

for people who appreciate quality and service
SHOP 28 TOORONGA VILLAGE,
SHOPPING CENTRE CNR. TOORAK &
TOORONGA RD., HAWTHORN 3122.
SPECIALISTS ELECTRICAL AND GAS APPLIANCES
EVERYTHING FOR THE HOME

20 6901 20 7912

35 Burwood rd Hawthorn 818-4638

PLANTS & SCULPTURES

Inspiring
Courtyard
Gardens

Frederick Busie of PLANTS & SCULPTURES can design a unique courtyard garden for you. Visit PLANTS
& SCULPTURES & see inspiring ideas for your courtyard garden.
Plants, sculptures, classic terracotta
& antique items. Fountains & paving installed. Open seven days.

10 High Street, Glen Iris, Victoria, 3146

A unique shop for Cat lovers or anyone looking for that something different in
Gift ideas Decor items
Antiques

RUG ANTI-SLIP

New grip matting will stop your rug sliding on smooth floors or creeping over carpets. Does not stick or stain and helps guard against wear.

E.M.P. (03) 347 0192
116 Bourke St., Carlton, 3053

MAGNOLIA SILK FLOWER ARRANGEMENTS

SPECIAL
$28.50

Australia's largest range
of quality silk flowers.
Call and discuss your requirements with us.

Let us create an arrangement for you
or choose from one already in stock.

Your container or ours!

Silk Flower Decor
1042 High Street, Armadale
(near Kooyong Rd.)
Phone: 500 0406

Birthday Sale

This month, our low prices are slashed as we celebrate our birthday.

Save $100's on top quality lounge, diningroom and bedroom furniture.

Basketware and Accessories are all heavily discounted.

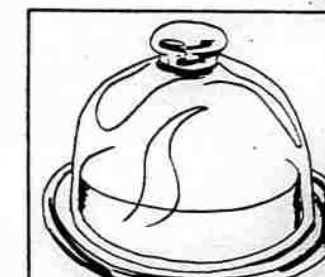

CALL AND BUY TODAY

CANE FLAIR

350 Hampton St. Hampton. 598 8454

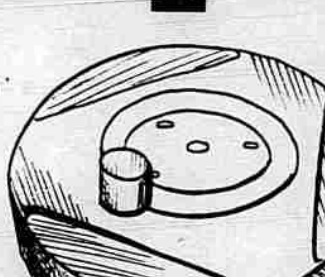

280 Whitehorse Rd. Balwyn. 830 4070

Extra pairs of hands for busy cooks.

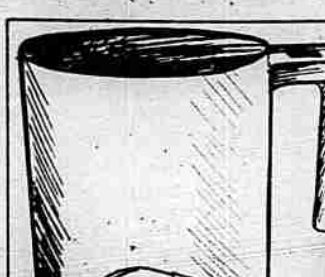

Onion Keeper Glass House. Keeps onions fresh for days. Prevents refrigerator odour.

$6.95

Cordless Juice Extractor. Squeezes natural fruit juice at the touch of a button. Easily cleaned. Batteries included.

$15.95

Cordless Flour Sifter. Aerates flour fast, efficiently. No spills. Batteries included.

$12.95

Cordless Mini Mixer. Electronic two-speed. Ideal for drinks, sauces. Batteries incl.

$7.95

Multi Measure Scales. Can be reset to allow exact measurement of each added ingredient. Imperial metric.

$19.95

Salad Spinner. Just spin it to mix salads, fruit or vegetables like a gourmet cook.

$9.95

Made-to-Measure Set. Graduated jug, 4 cup measures, 4 spoon measures.

$8.50

At Clark Habitat we've got a whole task force of clever gadgets ready to help you in the kitchen. From cordless juicers, mixers and flour sifters to salad spinners to onion keepers. They cost little money, they're simple — and they work. When it comes to meal preparation, you can hand it to our gadgets.

Clark HABITAT

The decorator corner in your Clark Maples Store

Prahran 529 7161, Ferntree Gully 758 6577, Frankston 783 2501, Dandenong 792 0208, Footscray 685 2222.